

CAREER EXPLORATION

DISCOVER the Right CAREER FIT.

Seek Meaningful and Challenging Work

We are all wired to seek purposeful work and experiences that resonate with who we are and our unique interests. Whether it's choosing a college major or transitioning into a new role, everyone wants to be in a position where they are performing meaningful and satisfying work.

People are more likely to achieve success and see advancement if they are engaged in and enjoy the work they do. People in the workforce are continually putting in more hours, so it is critical that individuals enjoy their job and feel challenged.

Start the Career Search from Within

Being in tune with personality and passions is important when exploring different career avenues. Self-assessment is a valuable way to clarify career directions and capitalize on the innate preferences that contribute to job satisfaction.

When empowered by this knowledge, individuals can better navigate towards their best fitting workplace.

Birkman gives individuals a deeper understanding of themselves, the career options that align to one's natural strengths, how they are motivated, and what interests them in a career.

Enhance Career Search with Personality & Professional Data

Birkman combines behavioral and occupational data, enabling individuals to better understand the careers best suited for them based on their personality and Interests. These insights can be used as a guide for exploring the career options that hold the highest potential for satisfaction.

Birkman ranks 18 professional job families and the associated job titles based on the similarities and differences of an individual's unique profile. These job titles are linked online to O*Net, the United States' primary source of occupational information.
